

MARCH 2006

Wisdom Withdrawal

Savvy Strategies Help Avoid Skill Shortages

THE DEMOGRAPHICS of the nation tell us we are getting more culturally diverse and increasingly older. "Beginning this year, every seven seconds in America, a Boomer turns 60, yet 70 percent of our survey respondents have not yet attempted to identify where business wisdom resides in their organization," says William Arnone of Ernst & Young's human-capital practice. "This means one thing: Corporate America is facing a significant wisdom withdrawal."

According to an exclusive report for the International Foundation of Employee Benefit Plans (IFEBP), Becoming an Employer of Choice: Strategies for Worker Recruitment and Retention, the skill shortages will begin to emerge when Baby Boomers (workers between the ages of 41 and 60) begin to retire, starting as early as 2006. Anticipated shortages in the domestic labor supply likely will be 5.3 million in 2010 and 14 million by 2020 as the cohorts that follow are just too small to replace the Boomers. "We're rolling into the most severe shortage of skilled workers that this country has ever seen," says Justin Heet, consultant, of Indianapolis' Hudson Institute and author of its white paper, Beyond Workforce 2020.

According to the IFEBP report, skill shortages create a sellers' market where employers (Continued on Page 2)

Outliving Their Money

Retirement Security Worries Workforce

OVER THE NEXT DECADE, the aging workforce will transform the way that both employers and employees think about work and retirement, according to Maria R. Morris, executive vice president, Institutional Business. "With increases in longevity, many workers recognize that they may need to stay in the workforce longer to fund their retirement, which could last 30 years or more."

According to the 2005/2006 MetLife Employee Benefits Trend Study, more than half (58%) of young Baby Boomers (age 41-50) are worried that they will have to work either full- or part-time to live comfortably during retirement, and 61 percent say that "outliving retirement money" is their number one retirement-related fear. Fueling these concerns is the fact that 27 percent of these Boomers admit to being "significantly behind" in their savings, and one in ten hasn't even started saving.

Likewise, Elaine Chao, U.S. Secretary of Labor, told public officials and retirement experts who gathered in Washington, D.C. (Cont. on Pg. 2)

Voluntary Benefits Movement

Employers Get Creative with Benefit Packages

THE BIG ISSUE FOR both large and small corporations is that the cost of medical care is continuing to increase. Employers across the country say they will absorb only a portion of the 54 percent increases in health benefits projected during the next five years, according to the Society for Human Resource Management. Consequently, as employers continue to cut back on their core benefit programs, many are offering their employees the ability to purchase voluntary benefit products through their workplace. Nearly 64 percent of U.S. employers offer at least one voluntary benefit product, according to Eastbridge Consulting.

Several factors are fueling the voluntary benefits movement: (1) Encouraging individual responsibility as the employees pay for their choices; (2) Helping to attract and retain a high-performing workforce by tailoring benefits to meet employees' lifestyle needs; (3) Offering new products, such as home and auto insurance, that historically have not been available through work; (4) Introducing the convenience of allowing employees to pay for voluntary benefits via payroll deduction throughout the year, which is especially attractive for high-cost items such as auto insurance; and (5) Saving employees money by paying for some benefits on a pre-tax basis. ■ will have to compete aggressively for the services of talented and, especially, technology-savvy workers.

Wisdom Withdrawal . . .

(Continued from Page 1)

Consequently, human resource management practices must be adapted to the sellers' market conditions. Productivity and profits will fall among firms that can't recruit, reward, and retain highly skilled workers during the coming shortage. According to the report, the general labor shortage will be felt most acutely as a skilled labor gap in the professional, managerial, and technical fields. A firm that figures out how to recruit skilled workers, retain them, and continuously enhance their productivity will become an employer of choice.

While there is no concrete formula for becoming an employer of choice, recommendations commonly offered suggest the following: (1) Continuously "re-recruit" top talent; (2) Give new hires jobs suited to their talents and engage their interest so they can succeed; (3) Promote from within, to the extent possible; (4) Treat highly skilled workers as professionals with control over their work; (5) Avoid layoffs; (6) If you must downsize, cut fat, not muscle; (7) Avoid across-the-board hiring freezes; (8) Overcommunicate with employees; (9) Accommodate employees' desires to achieve work-life balance, to the extent possible; (10) Get great mileage out of low-cost benefits (perks); and (11) Cultivate the future workforce by getting involved with education and training institutions. ■ recently for the 2006 National Summit on Retirement Savings that the country is on the verge of a tremendous demographic shift and that retirement issues are front and center on the public policy agenda. "The number of workers nearing retirement is, quite literally, booming. On the other hand, new entrants to the workforce typically are so far from retirement that they usually don't think about it at all." Similarly, she noted, low-income workers often are so worried about paying bills that "the urgency of today's needs often wins out over saving."

Outliving Their Money . . . (Continued from Page 1)

Consequently, employees may need financial education benefits more than employers realize as increasing financial woes are leading to health, productivity, and personal issues for American workers and fiscal and productivity issues for employers. According to the Society for Human Resource Management, only 27 percent of employers provide general financial education for their workers. Yet a 2005 employee poll by EAP provider ComPsych revealed that 28 percent of employees report that they are just one setback away from financial disaster. Another study by E. Thomas Garman finds that one in four employees is suffering from serious financial distress. Of those, between 40 and 50 percent say their health is negatively impacted, and 80 percent admit dealing with their financial issues at work. ■

Bulletin Briefs

- ◆ Employers to Send HIPAA Privacy Notice by April 14, 2006, 2007
Once every three years, health plans and flexible spending account plans must remind participants that their Notice of Privacy Practices (NPP) is available and how to obtain it. Large health plans must do so no later than April 14, 2006; small health plans, by April 14, 2007. Plans may satisfy this requirement by: (1) Sending a copy of the NPP; (2) Mailing a reminder about the availability of the NPP and how to obtain it; or (3) Including it in a plan-produced newsletter or other publication.
- ◆ You're Invited! Controlling Your Costs by Controlling Your Health
Coordinated Benefits Company, LLC in partnership with Workplace Solutions is excited to announce our first interactive wellness workshop! It will be held on Thursday, April 20th from 8:00am to 12:00pm. We will have a panel of experts investigating topics such as "Behavioral Health in the Workplace," "HSAs and How They Can Help Employers Take Control," and "Disease Management in the Workplace." Not only will it be an insightful time of learning and fun, but attending will give you 3.5 continuing education HR credits! For more information, please visit our website: www.cbcco.com and click on the link on our home page. Otherwise, to register, please go to: www.regonline.com/91469. Please hurry! Spaces are limited! ■

The HRinsider[®] bulletin is brought to you each month courtesy of Coordinated Benefits Company, LLC, a UBA[®] member firm. For more information, contact Nicole T. Geu at info@cbcco.com or 847.605.8560 x12.

MARCH 2006

Copyright © 2006 United Benefit Advisors, LLC. All Rights Reserved.